

A graduate of Kennesaw State University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Exercise and Health Science, and a Master's in Public Health from Mercer University, Ms. Khan is a dedicated public health professional who has worked in various public-private sectors of health care. From a pharmacy technician at Kroger to physician assisting at Northside Hospital and in a high-volume private Ob-Gyn practice, Ms. Khan also finds time to tirelessly volunteer for causes she believes in. From breast and prostate cancer to food insecurity, homelessness and geriatric care, Ms. Khan has been an affective grant writer, motivational speaker, and fund-raising event planner for 501c3. Ms. Khan serves as a patient advocate throughout metro Atlanta, frequently providing in-hospital translation services for Afghan, Indian, Pakistani and Bengali patients. She also developed and implemented a targeted exercise program that aided elderly dementia residents at the Savannah Plantation Assisted Living program. In addition, Ms. Khan is currently serving as a Chair of Public Health committee of NPU-J, city of Atlanta and a Co-Chair of Pink Panel of Georgia State University working tirelessly to formulate an intervention for communities to help in breast cancer screenings. Ms. Khan is also a member of ICART and helping global researchers to stay connected and continue to work on breast cancer. October 2019 she was invited by ABU in Zaria, Nigeria to give professional and public lecture on public health platform. From 2016 to 2018 Ms. Khan served Community Health and Men's Promotional Summit (CHAMPS) a 501c3 organization as an executive director. Ms. Khan also served as an Executive Director official Pro- Players Inc (2018) a nonprofit organization serving professional athletes on many platforms and connecting them to the community as well. As an entrepreneur Ms. Khan works very hard to help communities by giving employment opportunities currently, she is proudly serving as an Interim Executive Director of Georgia Prostate Cancer Coalition (GPCC). Ms. Khan is a single mother of three beautiful children, two boys and one girl, she lost her husband, her best friend, her lover, and an amazing partner to prostate cancer in 2015.